Dear Andre:

You know better than anybody that making decisions about educational programs can be a nightmare without any help. We're out to give you the help you need.

Curriculum Review, published by Lawrence Ragan Communications, is the only source you'll need to find out what's working in our schools. This nine-times-a-year magazine works to help K-12 teachers and administrators by sharing success stories, techniques, resources, opinions, and wisdom of other educators.

In just one issue, you'll discover everything you need to improve your educational efforts. For instance:

- How to administer tests more effectively
- New ways to help poor readers master basic skills
- The latest models for math learning
- Proven programs for teaching the gifted
- New methods for using computers as a teaching tool

But don't just take my word for it: See for yourself. Sign and return this letter to receive the next three issues of Curriculum Review free of charge.

If you like what you read, just honor the $89 invoice and we'll send you 9 additional monthly issues. If not, just mark the invoice
